To the Recruitment Team.

I'm writing to apply for the Jr. web developer position with your development team. With a history of being an integral member of a team, having extensive experience in both having to understand team objectives and to effectively communicate with team members, and working on goal oriented projects, I believe I can be a good fit for your team.

An education in math, philosophy, and law has prepared me for the kind of logic required in programming. Experience in the Army, as a teacher and tutor, and being a member of the US Post Office, has prepared me to work well with teams on goal oriented projects, and have good communication of ideas and problems.

My Training at Epicodus has given me the fundamental tools to grow as a programmer, and my love of learning and meeting challenges has me excited to grow in this field.

It would be exciting to be a member of your team, and to have the opportunity to continue developing the skills necessary to be a real asset.

Thank you for taking the time to consider my application. I hope to be a great addition to your team.

Sincerely,
Alexander Sergejev
